GARFIELD AND CONKLING. The quarrel between the President and Senator Conkling assumed a new phase last Monday, when both the New York Senators, Conkling and Platte, forwarded their restignations to the Governor of that State. As the legislature is still in session, the object of the resigning Senators seem to be to go before that body for re-election, and in their State to fight Garfield during the remainder of his administration. The strangest feature about the matter is that both branches of the New York legislature have, by resolution, formally endorsed the nomination by the President of Judge Robertson for Collector of the port of New York, and Conkling's opposition to Robertson is the main cause of the quarrel. How the legislature, after having thus endorsed the President, can now turn round and endorse Conkling, by re-electing hun, is one of those things which no fellow can understand. Yet Senator Cenkling, who, in our opinion, is the brainiest man in the United States, is not the person to take such a step without having carefully counted the noses of the Republican members of the legislature; and hence we assume he is absolutely certain of prompt reelection.

At present the hue and erv in the papers is largely with the President in this fight, but whether the applicants for postoffices, who edit so many Republican papers, represent the real sentiments of the party is by no means certain. At present there is no doubt Conkling is the under dog in the fight, and we always have a leaning toward the weaker side.

From a Colorado Miner.

ASPEN, PITKEN Co., Colorado, May 7, 81. EDITOR THE COUNTY PAPER:--If you will give me space for a few lines in your valuable paper, I will set 'em up when I strike it. Thinking my friends at Craig might be pleased to hear from the new mining camp, (Aspen,) I will give a sketch of its past, present and future.

In July 1879, I, with a small band of prospectors, wandered across the continental range, leaving all wagon roads and marks of civilization behind us.

We traveled with our pack train 75 miles westward without any trail to follow save that of the mountain lion, cinnomon bear, deer and elk.

We all felt jolly and cared for but little else than scaling the most abrupt peaks of the Rocky Mountains and we all had a good appetle for our suppers which consisted of flour, venison, bear meat and soffee. We were all good cooks and we baked our biscuits nice and round. We traveled on, examining the formation of the country, until we came to the head of the Roaring forks where the beautiful city of Aspen new stands. Here we found the same formation as in Leadville. So you see we concluded this was good enough for us; we didn't want the best, and we louated and went to work, which have since made this camp famous throughout the land. The Ute at that time ranged through this section at his own sweet will, with none to molest or make afraid and a contemplated visit to our little band of prospectors occasioned us to weigh anchor and sail out, but some of the boys returned late in the fall to sojourn there during the winter. In the spring 1880, it got whispered around that there was a young Leadville over on Roaring Forks; so in March 1880 I started on snow shoes to join the boys on Roaring Forks, equipped with a winchester riflle, six shooter and my blankets and 140 pounds of grub on a hand sled, and about thirty men followed my trail into camp. This was fourteen days of the hardest work I ever did. SPLENDID In the spring 1880 an immense amount of prospecting was done, to the total neglect of town building, and other val-uable locations were made, but it was tair city tooked on its present form and importance. There are now near 500 buildings in Aspen.

The basis of our prosperity is the mineral around us and Aspen city is located at almost the center of a belt of mineral which can be traced by the outcropping ore or wall rock a distance of nearly thirty miles. The ore is found between the silurian-lime and metamorphis or granite formations. All the de velopment shows up reasonably well, but it takes capitall and hard work to develop a mine. But don't you forget it there are treasures of gold and silver locked up in those mountains right

I have an interest in some very promising prospects and expect to make my jack when the camp is more fully de-veloped. Ranching is a good business here but all the ranches are taken up to the Ute reservation. There are good ranches to be had on the reservation, but I tell you those Utes are bad kind of fellows to monkey with.

posed of wire silver, scale silver, lead and sand carbonates, chlorides and bromides. A little more development and machinery will put Aspen right where she belongs, at the head of all mining camps in Colorado. There are fortunes for all here, but I advise none to come. I cannot describe to you the Our mineral here is a high grade comto come. I cannot describe to you the hardships of a prospector, and if I could you would not believe me. But this is the best country I ever saw for a business man with a little capital. One of my old camp, water and of my old camp mates sold a two-third interest in a mine for $30,000 and is now in Denver, smoking his cigars, and the purchaser will take out ore enough to pay for it in sixty days. Now, boys, I will bid you adieu and leave you in your glory behind the plow; but I say to the dogs with poverty and a bone without flesh. Come to the mountains and be brisk: if you don't make you can risk. RILEY C. WAGGONER.

During Lord Beaconsfield's whole illness his predominant anxiety seemed to be, says The London Times, that the cares of those who nursed him should if possible, be adequately recognized "How can they be rewarded? You will see to that," he said. To his faithful confidential servant Baum, who was formerly with Lady Beaconsfield, he said: "Baum, you will be a happy man; you will enjoy the pleasures of memory : you will remember what you have done for me." He was aware that the Queen had inquired frequently for him and at a period of his illness when he seemed unable to speak, the fact of her having done so for a time roused him in a manner surprising to those around him. At a later stage of the illness, when the spring air seemed to infuse a little more vitality into the system, Lord Barrington ventured to tell him that numbers of workingmen had called during the dinner hour to inquire for him. He seemed greatly touched, and said it gratified him much that those for whom he had striven to do his best should now recollect him. Very shortly before his illness he told a friend he put much trust in the workingmen. He was fond of children, and delighted in flowers.

The case of two Indianapolis husbands who agreed to swap wives, by means of divorce, is curious. The couples were intimate friends, and the trade has been amicably carried out. Dr. Baumuller went to St. Louis on a honeymoon tour, "Mr. Richter and I" he said to a Republican reporter, "are like brothers. Not very long ago I discovered that I loved Mrs. Richter betwife stood in exactly the same relation to each other. What were we to do? Quarrel? It was useless. It was so, and could not be helped. I had tried to suppress my feelings, and would have done so if I had not found that Lena, my wife, loved Richter and that Richter loved Lena. We did not quarrel; we arranged everything. We met, all four, Richter, Mrs. Richter, my wife, and myself, at Richter's house, and there we talked the matter over until we concluded that the best thing to do was to seek divorce." Dr. Baumuller is a reputable physician with a large practice. Richter has been a Street Commissioner, and is wealthy. In one respect he seems to get the best of the bargain, for his new wife is 29, while he is 60. Baumuller is 39.
